California Men Here to Urge New Highway

For the purpose of urging a new route between this city and Inyo county, a delegation of supervisors and business men from Benton and Bishop arrived by auto last evening. During the day they conferred with the county commissioners and with other prominent parties, asking that about 10 miles of natural road be constructed by Inyo and Mineral counties to supply a missing link in the proposed route.

The advantages urged for this new highway are that it would shorten the distance from this section of the country to California by many miles, making the drive from Tonopah to Yosemite an easy one-day trip by way of Tioga, and that it would cross only one summit, whereas the route now in use crosses four summits with some very heavy grades. Only a short stretch of road of about 10 miles between Coaldale and Basalt is necessary to connect up with roads already built, and according to the statements of the visitors from California, a large part of this 10 miles is almost a natural road, requiring very little work to transform it into a good highway.
